Why are we talking about this?

All around the world, every country is trying to slow down the spread of Coronavirus. But as you will see in this lesson, they're all doing it in a different way!

Here in the UK, the Government currently have a “Daily Briefing” where they update British people on what's currently happening here and what they want to do next.

On 27th April, Boris Johnson gave his first speech after spending time in hospital for Coronavirus. Click the image to hear it².

But would it make sense for everywhere to follow the same advice? Around the world there is a lot of debate about who's doing the best job and what other countries could learn from them. You will be exploring these today.

Just following advice?

What would you do? (10-15 mins)

Imagine that you are the leader of a country. On the next few slides, you are going to hear from some “experts” about how different lockdowns could affect your country. For each one, decide if you will listen to their advice or not.

Bad advice!

We should follow this!

How many of these world leaders can you name? You can find the answers in the notes section!

Just following advice?

If we stop a lockdown too early, the virus will spread quickly again, taking us back to the beginning. We must stay locked down until we know how to cure the virus.

Stopping businesses will cost the country a lot of money. Many people will lose jobs and some families won't be able to afford their rent, so we mustn't lockdown for too long.

If too many people get the virus at the same time, we won't have enough space in hospital to treat them. A "medium" lockdown is the best way to do this.

What would you do?
Would you follow this advice?

Bad advice!

I'm not sure

We should follow this!

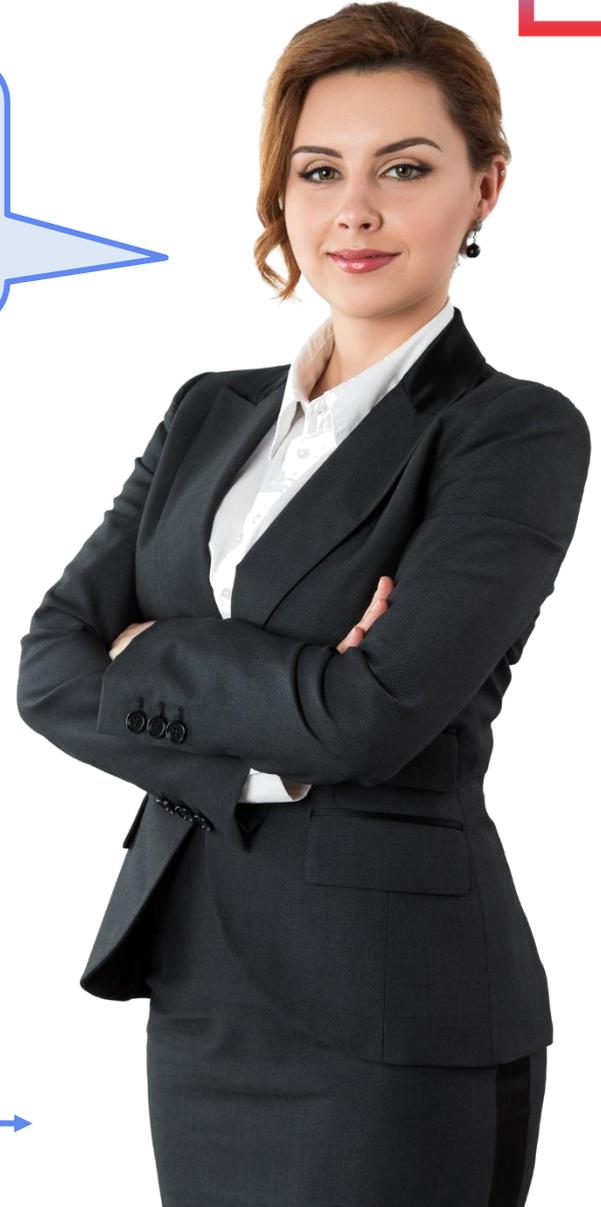

Just following advice?

A full lockdown will slow the spread of the virus. This is why people shouldn't leave their house unless they need food or they are a key worker.

What would you do?
Would you follow this advice?

Bad advice!

I'm not sure

We should follow this!

Just following advice?

Many people will complain about lockdown. They won't want to stay inside their houses and not go to work or school. We shouldn't lockdown at all.

What would you do?
Would you follow this advice?

Bad advice!

I'm not sure

We should follow this!

Just following advice?

The more people in a country, the more easily the virus can spread, so bigger countries need stricter lockdowns than smaller ones.

On the next few slides you are going to see some different opinions about how the world should respond to the Coronavirus. If you agree, put your thumb up. If you disagree put your thumb down.

I disagree!

Does one size fit all?

Every country is different, so what works in one country won't always work in a different one. They should do what's best for their people.

If every country does a different thing it will only take us longer to get back to normal. We should all work together as a team.

I disagree!

We should all be learning from each other, otherwise we'll keep making the same mistakes and it will take longer to stop the virus.

I agree!

I disagree!

Does one size fit all?

Even if one country gets rid of the virus and goes back to normal, no one will be able to travel in or out of that country in case they bring the virus back again. That's why we need to all do the same thing.

Vote with your thumbs

If you agree, put your thumb up. If you disagree put your thumb down.

More people in a country means that the virus can spread more easily, so the countries with the most people should have a stricter lockdown than smaller ones.

Should every country follow the same Coronavirus advice?

Yes	No
<ul style="list-style-type: none">• We are all facing this virus together. Different rules for different countries just makes things confusing.• We cannot go back to life as normal until every country has brought the virus under control. The best way to do that is to all follow the same rules.• Countries should learn from each other. If leaders see something working in another country, we should all do it.• There will be more problems in the future if we don't follow the same rules.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Every country is different, and what works in one place might not work in another.• Many countries cannot afford to follow the same rules as others. For example, poorer countries can't afford to lockdown for a long time.• The situation keeps changing, so our rules need to keep changing too. If we all had the same rules then we couldn't adapt to changes.• The long-term effects might be very bad for some countries if they have to do the same as everyone else.
